In tracing the history of Colonial Boston Navy Captain William Schofield came up with the idea of establishing The Freedom Trail which has become Boston's most famous tourist attraction. The simple idea of laying down bricks on the sidewalks to connect the various monuments and sites with one another was Bill's genial and practical solution that keeps on pleasing young and old alike be they from Boston or California. American history in many ways began. About the Author William Schofield has been on the faculties of the University of Minnesota for the past forty years. He is a professor in the department of psychiatry of the Medical School and in the department of psychology of the College of Liberal Arts and
